Chinese Transports Succeed Landing Troops of the Second Corps.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Sept. 19.-Despatches received here from Shanghai confirm the report of a severe battle fought on the Yalu River, between the fleets of China

The Chinese ships were escorting troops bound for Corea. The troops were the Second Army Corps, composed entirely of Huanese. According to the Chinese version.

there was no thought of surrender on either side. The ships of both nations, it is admitted, were terribly damaged. The Japanese had the advantage of the weather berth.

The Chinese fleet lacked room for menoeuvering. The Chen-Yuen, these despatches say, after fighting her guns to the last, was sunk by torpedoes, and a smaller Chinese vessel, which was unarmed, was blown up. The steel cruiser Chao-Yung, it is added, was so damaged that she had to be beached to escape capture, while the cruiser Yang-Wei was driven ashore, and has become a hopeless wreck. Both these ships are said to have been on

The Chinese claim that three Japanese warships were sunk, but their names are not given.

Further despatches state that in the buttle, the entire Pie-Yang or northern fleet of China was engaged, reinforced by some ships of the Foo-Chow squad-ron. The Chen-Yuen was the flagship of the northern fleet, and was commanded y Admiral Ting. The number of Japanese warships engaged is not stated, but as many of their vessels were stationed off Ping-Yang inlet, at the mouth of the Ta-Tong River, their number must have been small. From Chinese admissions it is gath ered that the losses on both sides in the William Fleming Then Said to Have naval engagement will total up several thousand. A Times despatch says that the Japanese fleet commenced the attack at noon, and the battle lasted until 5 P. M. The Chinese lost four ships. The Chen-Yuen was sunk, the King-Yuen was burned and the Chao-Yung and the Yang-Wei were stranded and partly

The despatch to The Times also agrees in saying that the Japanese are supposed to have lost three ships, and it adds that many Chinese were killed and wounded, among the injured being Admiral Ting, Col. Von Hannekin and Capt. Tyler, the two latter being foreign volunteers.

The Times correspondent confirms the statement that the Chinese were successful in landing the troops, which was the object of the fleet's presence at the mouth of the Yalu River.

NOT A HOMELESS WAIF.

Both a Liar and a Runaway.

Agent Babcock, of the Gerry Society, last evening found a scantily clad boy asleep in a vacant building at 5 Liberty place. The stories the boy told enlisted the sympathies of Mrs. Bretritweger, the sympathles of Mrs. Bretritweger, the janitress of the building, who permitted him to sleep there. He said his name was Michael McGuinnis, but that he did not know how old he was.

His father and mother, he said, died about a year and a half ago, and since then he has generally slept under the pier at the foot of Vesey street, enduring great hardships during last Winter. Michael said that save a brother, a truck driver, whose whereabouts he did not know, he had not a living relative.

He spent last night at the rooms of the Society, and appeared at the Tombs Court this morning neatly clad in clothing furnished by the Society. A sheepish look stole over his face and he hungh his head when his father, mother and one of his sisters, people of evident respectability, confronted him.

Then it was learned that the boy was John Collins, eleven years old, and that his father, Daniel Collins, was a bartender, residing at 14 Morris street. Mr. Collins said John had left home about a week ago, and since then no tidings were had of him. He is one of five children, and has caused his parents trouble before.

The parents promised Justice Ryan to give Johnnie a sound thrashing and to keep in future a closer watch on him. The Justice gave the boy a sharp lecture and let him go. the janitress of the building, who per-
